The place we call Crystal Cove State Park is located on the traditional and unceded lands and waters of the Acjachemen and Tongva Tribal Nations.

The historic beach cottages at Crystal Cove date back to the 1920s, when a community of visitors built beachside residences that would be enjoyed for generations.

In 1979, the land that is now Crystal Cove State Park, then owned by the Irvine Company, was sold to California State Parks and National Register of Historic Places status was secured for the entire Historic District.

Cottage pictures and descriptions can be found at CrystalCove.org.

Crystal Cove Conservancy is dedicated to protecting the historic, natural, and cultural resources of Crystal Cove State Park, and educating and inspiring the next generation of environmental stewards.

The unique public/private partnership with California State Parks means that revenue raised in the Park stays in the Park. As both the concessionaire and nonprofit partner of the Park, Crystal Cove Conservancy reinvests revenue from cottage rentals and food concessions back into Park programs.
